Ingersoil and his History.

Mr. Charles J. Ingersoll, who commenced his political career with the avowal "that if he had been old enough to have taken part in the Recolation he would have been a Tory," has written a History of the late War with England. The book is said to furnish convincing proof that the predilections of his youth were those of his maturitythat he was a tory in youth, a tory in mature age and still remains a tory. In his History he assuled the character of Com. Stewart, and the memory of Com. Bairbridge. A vindication by the former appears in the columns of the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer. It is a heavy gan and will silence the batteries of Ingersoil, whose histoty abounds with the most mulicious libels upon the living and the dead. The following extract from page 190, respecting Gen. Harrison is an instance:

"Thus closed the military curver of William Henry Harrison; who afterwards served as a member of both Houses of Congress, on a foreign mis sion to Columbia, in South America, which he soligited, was elevated from the elerkship of a court in Cincinnati to the Presidency, and ofter one shirt month of terrelerous triumph in that office, the Presidential mension The house was thronged with people, even the chamber in which he died, not free from ille intrusion. He expired with incoherent words of patriotism on his lips before difficulties and discrections, to which his administration was inevitably destand, leaving the world with most men of all parties inclined to think well of his c'uracter, to magnicy his virtues. extenuate his foibles, regest his death, and celebrate his memory."

Texus Smuggling.

The last argument in favor of annexation is that it will enable us to become smugglers to an immense extent. It is said that, if the Rio Grande be made the boundary between the United States and Mexico, the whole north of Mexico will be in the hands of American smugglers. The N. O. Balletin predicts that American goods will be smuggled into Mexico to such an extent as to break up the monopoly Great Britain new enjoys of the trade of that country. Mexican silver, which was a few years since imported largely into N. Orleans, now is said to go principally to England in the British steamers. This, the Bulletin expects, will be reformed through the smugglers; but it bases its anticipations upon these facts: the extravagunce of the Mexic in tariff on imports, the proneness of the Mexicans to smuggling, and the great convenience of smuggling across the Rio Grande, which it says cannot be prevented by an army of 50,000 men stationed on that stream.

Loco Focoism has displayed great ingenuity in devising arguments in favor of annexation-such as the extension of the area of freedom and defence of the South, but this last argument, that we shall be able to become smugglers to an indefinite extent, "caps the climax."

New York, Oct. 7, 1845.

In my letter of the 1tt. I made a short protation from a morning paper of the 3d. The writer of the article referred to, says: Those connected with the Kitchen Cabinet dynasty at Washington, having bro't General Jackson up to the scratch," &c. to remove the deposites from the Bank of the United States

Now, this is doing the General great injustice, and a full detail of the intrigues by which that measure was so suddenly of fected, may not, even at this late day, be uninteresting to many of your readers --The true history is known to but few .-General Jackson intended to remove the all, or nearly all, opposed to it. The most strenuous opponent was Louis McLane, then Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. Livingston, Secretary of State, and General Cass, Secretary of War, were both against was also decided in his opposition to it.-He was then at Albany, where he had Buren's change of views on the remova. when he was to repair to Washington to change was announced to him, he was could not change front. Mr. Van Buren left Washington, and shortly after the Presidential tour began All remember the celatof that. The whole country thro' which the President passed appeared to have forgotten party distinctions. All seemed to be Jackson men At New York Mr. Van Buren met the President, No man was so much carried away as was he by acclamations which every where attended Jackson. Then it was that the conviction first rushed upon his mind that Kendall's threat had a significant meaning, and that there was no safety or security for him but in ministering freely to Jackson's wishes, prejudices, and will.

At New Haven, and through Connecneut, the acclamations of the multitude as the President progressed were, if possible increased, and with them Mr. Van Buren's convictions. At Boston they became ir-resistable. The President was ill there a day, and confined to his room. It was on that occasion that Mr. Van Buren first announced to him his change of views; confessed that he had been in error; that Kendall was right and honest about it that Mr. McLane and Mr. Livingston erring in the matter, and his foresight prophotic. The next day the General left Boston for Concord. Who has forgotten the homage he received, and the "mi'e of girls" who came to do him honor on his four feet two inches. tour? The papers in New York were teeming with accounts of his journey, when every body was astonished with a postscript saying that General Jackson had suddenly cut short his tour, returned from the East, and passed through New York at day light for Washington. In ticenty hours more he was in the capital, and his deposites in February, 1833, during the Cabinet and every body else could not session of Congress, but his Cabinet were have been more as onished if a mine had been sprung under the city.

The reason assigned for this sudden secret of this sudden return was Mr. Van ald Oct. 23. Boren's change of views on the removal spent the winter, waiting for the period of the deposies. From the moment that when he was to repair to Washington to change was announced to him, he was enter upon his office. It will be recollected that it was during that winter that N. P.
